The principal tenet of this theory is that matter is an illusion, and that therefore what is supposed to be bodily disease is an error of the mind, which may be cured by leading the patient to apprehend the truth as revealed in the teaching and healing of Jesus Christ. The churches of Christian Scientists are called 'First (Second, etc.) Church of Christ, Scientist'.

B. sb. A mason or builder belonging to this guild.

1899 'L. Scott' Cathedral Builders 5 The origin of the name Comacine Masters has caused a great deal of argument amongst Italian writers new and old. Some think it merely a place-name referring to the island of Comacina, in Lake Lario or Como; others take a wider significance, and say it means not only the city of Como, but all the province, which was once a Roman colony of great extension. Others again, among whom is Grotius, suggest that it is not a place-name at all, but comes from the Teutonic word Gemachin or house-builders. As the Longobards afterwards called them in Italian Maestri Casarii, which means the same thing, there is perhaps something to be said for this hypothesis. Ibid. 9 Rome is full of remains of what is now styled Comacine architecture. Ibid. 17 There is no certain proof that the Comacines were the veritable stock from which the pseudo-Freemasonry of the present day sprang. 1900 Monthly Rev. I. 103 The Comacine masters have their existence sufficiently proved by the edict of Rotharis (dated 653). Ibid. 104 The collegiate and Comacine constitutions.

II. c. Mil. To keep (a superior enemy force) in position, by engaging its attention so that it cannot undertake any offensive action elsewhere. Freq. in ppl. adj. (containing force).

1899 Westm. Gaz. 21 Nov. 5/3 The opinion is now generally entertained in Sir George White's camp that only a containing force has been left outside Ladysmith, and that the bulk of the Boer commandos have moved south. Ibid. 23 Nov. 5/1 It is obviously impossible for Joubert to be able to contain White at Ladysmith, Hildyard at Estcourt, and Clerf at Maritzburg. 1899 Daily News 27 Nov. 5/2 Not the besiegers of our several garrisons, but the garrisons themselves, have been playing most effectively the part of 'containing' forces in the military sense. 1900 H. A. Gwynne in War's Brighter Side (1901) 174 Infantry will be used for two purposes—to contain the opposing infantry, and to hold positions seized by the mobile portion of the force. 1904 Westm. Gaz. 11 Aug. 7/2 The Japanese, having left a containing force at An-shan-shan, are advancing with their principal force to the east.

Contaminate, v. Add:

b. Palaeography, pass. To suffer contamination (see next, c).

1913 F. W. HALL Comp. Class. Texts 128 Contaminated texts existed in very ancient times.

Contamination. Add:

1. c. (a) The blending of two or more stories, plots, or the like into one.

1877 Encycl. Brit. VII. 411/2 The Roman versions were probably tamer than their originals, which they often altered by the process called contamination. 1909 Nation (N.Y.) 22 Apr. 407/2 In 'All Fools,' for example, we have a 'contamination,' to use the technical term, of the 'Heautontimoroumenos' and the 'Adelphi,' plus a sub-plot of Chapman's own invention.

(b) Philology. The blending of forms, words, or phrases of similar meaning or use so as to produce a form, word, or phrase of a new type.

1888 STRONG in Paul's Princ. Lang. 160 By 'contamination' I understand the process by which synonymous forms of expression force themselves simultaneously into consciousness, so that neither of the two makes its influence felt simply and purely: a new form arises in which elements of the one mingle with elements of the other. Ibid., Contamination manifests itself partly in the phonetic form of single words, partly in their syntactical combination. 1891 STRONG, LOGEMAN & WHEELER Hist. Lang. 142 We may lay it down that for analogy we must demand a sufficient number of examples on which to base a rule; while for contamination, a single form or construction may suffice. 1901 OETHEL Lect. Study Lang. 174 The structure of grammatical paradigms does not escape contamination.

(c) Palaeography. A blending of manuscripts resulting in the occurrence in a manuscript or group of manuscripts of readings belonging to different lines of tradition.

1913 F. W. HALL Comp. Class. Texts 130 The problem of relationship [of MSS.] is often rendered exceedingly complex by the tendency which is variously described as 'contamination', 'mixture', or 'eclectic fusion' of the different groups.

Contango, v. [f. the sb.] trans. To pay contango on (stocks or shares); also absol. to obtain deferment of payment of the purchase price of stocks in consideration of a contango.

1900 Westm. Gaz. 30 Apr. 9/1 In Chili they should have earned at least 8 per cent., on deposit here 3 per cent., and if used in 'contangoing' stocks, as in the case of the Bank of Tarapaca, considerably more. 1922 Weekly Westm. Gaz. 20 May 31/1 Probably at first many of the opponents of the measure may refuse to contango at all. 1928 Morning Post 19 Nov. The broker will, as a rule, endeavour to carry over, give on, or contango—the words all mean the same thing—the 50 Gramophone shares.

1924 F. C. LEA in Proc. Inst. Mech. Engin. II. 1266 At stresses slightly above this the creep was continuous and the bar broke. Ibid. 1072 It will thus stand a higher stress without creep. 1928 Daily Express 29 June 6 Investigations are being made into the 'creep' in metals.

9. The slip of the belt on the pulley drum, or wheel over which it runs.

Creep, v. Add:

4. c. Of salts in solution: To rise in crystals upon the sides of the containing vessel.

1900 Nature 4 Oct. 564/1 Dr. Tronçon gave a short account of his experiments on the creeping of liquids, and on the surface tensions of mixtures. He has found that the tendency of certain liquids to creep up the sides of their containing vessels is due to such liquids being mixtures. 1901 W. R. COOPER Prim. Batteries 195 When evaporation of a salt takes place in a glass vessel, crystals form on the vessel near the surface of the solution; and... the crystals grow backwards and finally grow over the top of the vessel.

This 'creeping', as it is termed, is avoided in Leclanché cells by dipping the tops of the glass pots into ozokerite or paraffin wax. 1911 T. MATHER Ayrton's Pract. Electr. 194 Their compactness, portability, freedom from all creeping of the salts.

8. Also, to increase very gradually in length under excessive stress.

1899 J. A. EWING Strength Mater. 24 When a load exceeding the elastic limit is applied the strain which occurs at once is followed by a continued 'creeping' or supplementary deformation. 1911 — in Encycl. Brit. XXV. 1074/1 The elastic limit is the point... at which a tendency to creep is first seen. 1924 F. C. LEA in Proc. Inst. Mech. Engin. II. 1053 The problem is to find the safe stress at which the material will not change form or creep. Ibid. 1072 At 11.40 a.m. on the 17th the specimen had crept 0.2 millimetre, but at 11.40 a.m. on the 14th the creeping had ceased.

10. Of soil, etc.: To be gradually moved or dislocated.

1843 J. PHILLIPS in Rep. Brit. Assoc. (1844) 61 This seemed to be the result of a 'creeping' movement of the particles of rock along the planes of cleavage. 1855 — Man. Geol. 85 Thus the mica and chlorite which generally meet the surfaces of lamination, appear to have been shouldered about, without being fused, twisted in their structural planes, and subject to that curious minute folding which is often observed as one of the effects of cleavage structure in delicate and pliable shells in slates, for which the term 'creep' was used by the author in 1843.

11. Of a rubber tyre. (Cf. *CREEP sb. 10.)

1903 Motoring Anni. 300 It is claimed for the Collier tyre that it cannot possibly creep. 1908 Westm. Gaz. 25 Feb. 4/2, I understand that they have a great tendency to creep.

1892 H. W. HUGHES Coal-mining 353 No better appliance has been introduced for minimising the cost of conveying tubs about the headstall than that known as the 'finger' or 'creeper' chain. [i.e. a chain of endless chains in the form of a comb.]

5/3 A creeper rope tied from bank to bank. 1909 Ibid. 30 Dec. 5/4 We finally managed to get another creeper bridge between the island and the opposite bank, and hauled the women and children to a place of safety.
